

MRS. HALE PLEASES LARGE AUDIENCE

Suffrage Address Eloquent and Hearers Charmed
With Her Manner.

With main floor and gallery crowded to capacity and many persons standing in the Circuit court room of the Marion county court house last night, Mrs. Beatrice Forbes Robertson Hale, delivered one of the most brilliant lectures on suffrage ever heard in this city. The audience last night was about an evenly divided one between men and women. With an unusually pleasing personality Mrs. Hale immediately won her audience by her charm of manner, when she was introduced by Hon. O. S. McKinney in one of his characteristically fine speeches in which he endorsed suffrage and then in a complimentary manner introduced Mrs. Hale to the gathering.

Mrs. Hale at once took up her subject and discussed it in a true womanly style and manner holding the closest attention of her audience throughout the evening. It is probable that she won many converts before her address was concluded. While she attacked the anti-suffragists, she did this in such a ladylike and pleasant manner that even the anti-suffragists could hardly have taken offense.

She classed the anti-suffragists in three classes; first the large factory owner or the employer of labor, second, the saloon interests, wholesale and retail and third, small body of women known as anti-suffragists. She stated that while there was no direct connection as far as she knew, between the anti-suffragists and the saloon keepers, the fact that they were both working to defeat the suffrage cause led to the conclusion that they were associated in the matter.

"Equality of Opportunity! The God given right of equality of opportunity and not the equality of man and woman, or men with women," was the main theme of the plea made by the speaker. "Men," said Mrs. Hale, "are the business promoters, the makers and carriers out of big schemes; and the women don't want to compete with them. Women are interested in the child, the home, child welfare, sanitation, etc., which the men are too busy to give much attention to. Men vote to control the big business affairs and interests while the biggest thing in the world, the care and preservation of the children of the land, which is the women's business, is unprotected by the vote."

Mrs. Hale welcomed opposition as put up by the anti-suffragists as she only spurred the suffragists to greater efforts. Closing her talk with a strong appeal to the men of the audience to support the suffrage amendment to the state constitution this fall, and urging the women to be diligent in their work to obtain for the women of West Virginia an equal chance with men. Mrs. Hale left her today for Wheeling where she is scheduled to address a meeting. She will spend one week in the state work.

ANNA HOWARD SHAW COMING INTO STATE

Will Preach at Morgantown
Sunday and Speak Here Monday.

Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, Honorary President National American Woman Suffrage Association.

Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, the famous Methodist Protestant clergyman, lecturer and advocate of equal suffrage, will preach her first sermon in West Virginia on Sunday, October 8. She will be heard in Morgantown and immense interest has already been aroused by her coming. On the following day she will begin a tour of the state in the interest of the pending franchise amendment to the state constitution which will take her into all the larger cities and most of the big counties of the state.

Dr. Shaw is a graduate of Albion college in Michigan, one of the few institutions which granted degrees to women at the time she was a student. On graduation she studied at the Boston university and there received her theological degree. She became then an ordained minister in the Methodist Protestant church. This denomination is especially strong in West Virginia and wherever she goes she will find congregations of her persuasion.

Of late years Dr. Shaw has had no regular pulpit through which she has preached frequently. She has devoted her time largely to the interests of women and of various humanitarian organizations. She has spoken in every state of the Union and probably no woman is wider known. Her coming to West Virginia to make a campaign for the suffrage amendment is a distinct gain for the forces battling for ballots for women. Being in her seventieth year, yet she is vigorous and full of fire. No woman is better posted on the questions of the day and none can present her point of view with more force or vigor.

Dr. Shaw will be heard in this city on Monday, October 9.
